Kings' House is historically significant for its Transitional Prairie Style, which is described by designer, Frank Lloyd Wright, as "the city man's country home on the prairie." Renovations permitted & approved by City of Dallas Department of Planning & Urban Design & the Conservation District Work Review Board. Special consideration made to preserve the home's original beauty & craftsmanship. The embodiment of Wright's belief that providing a secure, private, sheltered space closely tied to the local natural landscape, this home unites "man, nature and architecture." It maintains its appeal to those who recognize & enjoy the finer things in life & the importance of preserving its history for future generations. Nestled in Dallas' oldest Conservation District & minutes from the Bishop Arts District, enjoy idyllic living just a short walk from award-winning dining, shopping, art galleries, wine bars, & coffee shops.
