Designed by prominent period architect Roscoe D. Hemenway in a Tudor Revival style this beautiful southern-exposure home is sited on an exceptionally large and level .72 acre parcel along stately Country Club Drive in Lake Oswego. The home has a significant set-back from the drive yet still retains a very large and level rear yard that could easily accommodate a pool or sports court perhaps both or just a wonderful garden that Oregon is so well known for. The home is along the pedestrian-friendly side of Country Club and views the Lake Oswego Country Club golf course across the street. Lovely entry with curved stairwell, period banisters, and graceful archways catch your eye. Sun streams into all main rooms including the cheery galley style kitchen with bright accents that reflect a country french spirit. Original glass front cabinetry complement the cozy breakfast nook. Intimate master suite and three more bedrooms and a remodel of the lower level great room
