One of the oldest and most historic homes in Edgewater is now for sale for the first time in decades. Originally known as the "Edgewater Tapestry Looms" (1913-1934), it became renowned for weaving museum-quality, custom tapestries for clients such as John D. Rockefeller. The home features soaring ceilings, exposed stone walls, wood floors, vintage skylights, 3 bedrooms, bathrooms, family rooms and studies in a one-of-a-kind rustic garden setting. Enjoy Hudson River, GW Bridge and Manhattan views from the front, and a private forest preserve in the back with deer, hawks and more. Walking distance to NYC bus line and NY Waterway ferry and a 15-minute ride to midtown! The new GW elementary school is a block away. Convenient, centrally located, but very private. This property is perfect for the discriminating buyer looking for something very special, unique and charming. Must be seen to be appreciated, Hurry! This one definitely won't last!
