Nestled in total privacy in the heart of legendary Paradise Valley, Silver Crow House has a setting that is unrivaled. Coming from the county road, where the snow covered peaks of the Absaroka Range spread out against Montana's big sky, it seems as if the leafy driveway will lead only to a creek. But suddenly the road opens out revealing a sun dappled stone and wood building, which at first glance seems to be a rustic barn, but is in fact an imaginative and brilliantly designed three bedroom, three bath home.

Outside the front door, the old world craftsmanship evident throughout the property is immediately obvious in the hand-laid exterior flatstone work. The stonework perfectly complements the texture and color of the reclaimed timber siding, suggesting Tuscan villas or weathered Montana barns. But inside, the 21st century design elements banish any thought of old: steel & iron bannisters harmonize with a massive vaulted ceiling of more reclaimed timbers; a wall of 7' doors and windows allow the light to pour in, casting golden tones across the rich hardwood floors. The creek, meandering over smooth rocks, fills the house with sounds of quiet water.

Soapstone countertops, deep sinks and custom made wood and glass cabinets make the kitchen something a cook only dreams of, and the double sided Tulkakivi wood burning fireplace will warm the family as they gather: use the space in this wonderful Great Room as you like -- dining area on one side of the s...
